Dear Friends of The American Hospital of Paris Foundation,

Although I am unable to join you at the Award Gala this evening due to a long-standing commitment in Washington, I am delighted to extend a warm welcome to those of you partaking in tonight's celebration at the Plaza Hotel in New York City.

Founded in 1910, the American Hospital of Paris has grown and thrived for over 100 years and provides the finest health care both in France and throughout all of Europe. Granted a special federal charter and incorporated by a special act of the U.S. Congress in 1913, the Hospital has been an extension of U.S. diplomacy ever since. The French government designated the Hospital as an institution of public benefit in 1918 because of its treatment of thousands of French soldiers as well as more than 100,000 Allied soldiers during the two world wars. The Foundation aims to further partnerships that leverage the Franco-American spirit of cooperation, and provides major philanthropic support in order to improve technology and facilities and to maintain and enhance the quality of medical and patient care. I would like to express my deepest gratitude to each of you for your generous support of this unique and important institution.

I would also like to express heartfelt congratulations to the 2016 award recipient, Donna Chapman, who is a wonderful person and well deserving of being honored this evening. Donna has a strong attachment to France and to the mission of The American Hospital of Paris Foundation. As former Chairman of the Foundation, she has served on the Foundation's Board of Directors for over twenty years and has been a member of the Hospital's Board of Governors as well. Her enduring dedication and loyalty to the American Hospital of Paris merits recognition. Félicitations!

I wish you all a wonderful evening.

Dear Friends of The American Hospital of Paris Foundation:

Although I am unable to join you this evening due to a prior engagement, which I deeply regret, I would like to extend my warmest greetings to all of you participating in tonight's celebration at the Plaza Hotel in New York City.

The American Hospital of Paris, established more than a century ago thanks to the determination and generosity of the men and women of Paris's American community, has continued to evolve ever since. Today it sets the standard for personalized and high-tech patient care. The American Hospital of Paris is also a wonderful French-American venture, whose history is inseparable from the two World Wars and the brotherhood of arms between our two nations. For both of these reasons, the American Hospital of Paris remains more important than ever, and we must continue to promote this great institution. That's why I would like to express my warm appreciation to each of you for your commitment and support.

I also want to congratulate the 2016 award recipient, Donna Chapman, who is an extraordinary person and the perfect choice to be the guest of honor at this gala evening. A confirmed Francophile, Donna's commitment to French-American friendship is second to none. Donna joined the Board of Directors of The American Hospital of Paris Foundation in 1994, and served as the Chairman of the American Hospital of Paris Board of Directors from 2007 to 2012. I am delighted to join in recognizing her generosity, dedication and steadfast loyalty to the American Hospital of Paris over many years. Bravo, Donna!

I wish you all a wonderful evening.

THE AMERICAN HOSPITAL OF PARIS FOUNDATION

Barbara Cirkva Schumacher

Henry P. Davison, II

Dear Friends:

It is our pleasure to welcome you to The American Hospital of Paris Foundation 2016 Award Gala.

The American Hospital of Paris Foundation celebrates its 40th anniversary this year. Since 1976, the Foundation has been the vital link between the United States and the American Hospital of Paris. From the day it opened its doors in 1910, the American Hospital of Paris has brought together the American and international communities in a very special way. It is America's Hospital in Europe, the meeting ground for European and U.S. medical science, technology and doctors: a place where medical experts and specialists from around the world come to study its diagnostic methods, personalized patient care and facilities. More than 200,000 patients from over 100 countries pass through its doors each year.

We are delighted tonight to be honoring Donna Chapman, a recognized leader in a variety of businesses and a respected and admired philanthropist of the arts and healthcare. Donna is a former Chairman of The American Hospital of Paris Foundation and has served on the Foundation's Board of Directors for over twenty years. She has also been a member of the American Hospital of Paris Board of Governors. A confirmed Francophile, Donna has a strong attachment to France and to the mission of The American Hospital of Paris Foundation. She has generously supported it, and we are honored to recognize her dedication and steadfast loyalty over many years.

The American Hospital of Paris is not subsidized by either the French or American governments and relies solely on patient revenues and contributions for its operations. That is why your support is so deeply appreciated by all of us connected to the Hospital. Your generous participation is allowing us to sponsor valuable exchange programs that enable physicians and nurses to visit and work with our partner, NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital, and to fulfill a variety of needs that enable the Hospital to thrive and grow.

Thank you for your invaluable support, and have a wonderful time at the Gala.

Best regards,

Dave Price

Dave Price is the weekday afternoon and early evening weather anchor at WNBC - NBC Universal's flagship television station in New York. He has been anchoring, reporting, and forecasting based out of New York City for fifteen years.

Prior to joining WNBC, he co-anchored Good Day New York at WNYW-FOX5. He steered the morning broadcast through coverage of the Sandy Hook shootings, Empire State Building shootings and Superstorm Sandy.

Before FOX5, Dave spent eight years as the weather anchor for the CBS News broadcast The Early Show and covered major weather events for the CBS Evening News as well.

Dave has had a first-person view of some of the most momentous events of our time. He was in New York City, on-air, as the tragic events of September 11 unfolded. He was one of the few reporters who spent the night enduring Hurricane Katrina inside the Superdome in New Orleans with the people he was covering. He was in Haiti in the early hours of the aftermath of the earthquake, which ravaged that country in 2010, and was dispatched to the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico as those along the Southeastern shoreline came to grips with the environmental disaster. On more pleasant occasions, Dave has been our eyes and ears at the center of the action during Presidential Inaugurations, Super Bowls, NBA Championships, World Series, Final Fours, U.S. Opens, Olympics, and ticker-tape parades.

He began his TV career in Erie, PA, as the morning weatherman at WSEE-TV. A year later he was named morning weather anchor at WBBM-TV, the CBS station in Chicago. Eventually, Dave joined Fox's Good Day Philadelphia as its co-host until moving to New York to do weather on Good Day New York at FOX Television's flagship station, WNYW-TV. In 2003, he moved to WCBS and CBS News. He has won five Emmy Awards and a Gracie Award for his work.

Dave is a certified scuba diver, licensed pilot and avid photographer. He and his wife Jacqueline live in New York City with their son Eli, daughter Caroline and their golden retriever Wally.

Madame Christiane Guerlain

"A courageous, generous, elegant and unassuming woman, with the keen sense of friendship. (...) All the important things she has accomplished, or almost, in her life have some connection with the United States." - President Giscard d'Estaing

On any one day over the past 40 years until this fall, you may have seen her in the Hospital's corridors. This woman devoted a large part of her life as a volunteer at the American Hospital of Paris. She was above all committed to providing support and comfort to the patients at the American Hospital of Paris.

Christiane Lesieur Guerlain was the eldest of three children of a leading French entrepreneur. In 1942, at a time when she was struggling with the German occupation of Paris, her father asked her to accompany him to Algeria to watch over the family company's interests.

Christiane, a young French woman from a well-to-do family, spoke fluent English. She very soon found herself in demand and became a liaison agent between the French resistance and American and British diplomats who were preparing the Allied landing in North Africa.

Once the landing had taken place, she decided to stay on in Algeria and enlisted in the army as a volunteer nurse interpreter.

She was intent on providing moral support to the many wounded Allied military evacuated from the combat zones in Libya and Tunisia. "Confronted with these wounded men, I realized that I was in good health, that I had a pleasant life and that I had to do something to help others." She did so for the remainder of her life.

The war finally ended. Back in Paris in civilian life, she married Jean-Pierre Guerlain and helped her husband rebuild the international network of Maison Guerlain that had been disrupted by the war. Together, they made it one of the leading French perfumers. But Christiane needed to do more to help others.

It was when she was visiting a friend hospitalized in the American Hospital of Paris, that the idea came to her: with the experience she had gained with wounded soldiers during the War and what she had seen in the American hospitals, she would create at the AHP a service that was unknown in France at the time, the Women's Auxiliary, a group of volunteer women committed to providing support to patients. She spent around four full days a week alongside patients on an entirely voluntary basis. Today, the AHP Volunteers Association still works with the same purpose in mind, and until her death Christiane remained its Honorary President.

In 1977, Christiane Guerlain was elected to the AHP Board of Governors – whose members are all volunteers – at the suggestion of its Chairman, David T. McGovern. She was the first woman in the history of the AHP to sit on the Board. She became a member of the eminent Development Committee.

She was an Ambassador with an exemplary sense of generosity. Over the years, Christiane Guerlain formed precious ties between the Hospital and the international community in Paris. She organized many events attended by ambassadors, donors, doctors and governors, with her characteristic attention to ensuring everything was perfect: she was always attentive to people, protocol and each little detail that counts.

In 2007 the Board of Governors presented her with the first Extraordinary Dedication Award for her incomparable commitment to the AHP. In 2012, she was awarded the Medal of the AHP Foundation at a reception held in the residence of the United States Ambassador to France.

Christiane Guerlain remained an indefatigable ambassador for the American Hospital and the American Hospital of Paris Foundation until her death on September 18, 2016.

THE AMERICAN HOSPITAL OF PARIS

From the day it opened its doors in 1910, the American Hospital of Paris has brought together the American and international communities in a very special way. In 1913 the American Hospital of Paris received a federal charter granted by a special Act of the United States Congress.

It is America's Hospital in Europe, the meeting ground for European and U.S. medical science, technology and doctors: a place where medical experts and specialists from around the world come to study its management, diagnostic methods and facilities. More than 200,000 patients from over one hundred countries pass through its doors each year.

Shortly after its founding and as Europe prepared for war, the Hospital created the famous American Field Service, which during World War I transported thousands of wounded French soldiers to its ambulatory military hospital in the war zones. During World War II, the Hospital functioned during the occupation, treating more than 100,000 French, American and British soldiers and civilians. In 1940, the French government awarded the Hospital the Ordre de l'Armée and the Croix de Guerre, the highest military honors for service during wartime.

Following World War II, the Hospital continued to expand throughout the 1950s. Housing for interns and doctors was completed to help deal with a housing shortage in Paris, and the East Wing of the Hospital was completely renovated according to the latest in American hospital design. In 1954, an agreement was reached with Blue Cross/Blue Shield which entitled the American Hospital of Paris to file directly with Blue Cross on the patient's behalf, an arrangement which continues today.

By the mid-1960s, the Eisenhower Pavilion was added and the outpatient department was expanded, along with a new x-ray department and an intensive care unit, making the American Hospital of Paris the first private hospital in France to have an ICU.

In the 1970s, The American Hospital of Paris Foundation was formed to raise funds for and represent the Hospital in the United States. A large volunteer team was also organized in France and has been a great asset to the Hospital in terms of manning the patient library, making patient visits, assisting at the front desk, and raising funds.

Within the past thirty-five to forty years, the Hospital has seen extraordinary growth. A new wing was opened, almost doubling the number of patient beds. A new multi-specialty outpatient department was opened, along with a cardiology unit and CCU. A prenatal diagnostic center and a medically assisted procreation center were inaugurated, which today are the second largest in France. CT scanners, MRI and other state-of-the-art equipment, technology and treatments have been installed. The Florence Gould Pavilion, with a 200-seat auditorium and a new medical library, opened. The Check-Up Center, a new molecular biology laboratory and a pediatrics center were opened, and the operating rooms and patient suites renovated. The American Hospital of Paris is the only civilian hospital outside the United States accredited by the Joint Commission based on its stringent U.S. standards.

The Hospital is not subsidized by the French or American governments and relies on patient fees and contributions for its operations.

THE AMERICAN HOSPITAL OF PARIS FOUNDATION

Since 1976, our country's bicentennial year, The American Hospital of Paris Foundation has been the vital link between the United States and the American Hospital of Paris. Over the years, the Foundation has funded special projects and collaborative programs with the AHP and NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital. This unique affiliation enhances the prestige of both organizations and provides opportunities for the exchange of ideas and personnel between Paris and New York.

Based in New York, the Foundation provides major philanthropic support for the Hospital's capital and operating needs to maintain and enhance quality of care. The Foundation's mission is to promote awareness in the United States of the Hospital's extraordinary work and capabilities and to raise funds to maintain and enhance the high quality of medical care at the American Hospital of Paris.
